Hartley, the Watchmaker, Indulges in a Joke.

He Hides Up Eighteen of His Watches, and Then Informs the Police That His Store Has Been Burglarized.

Last night, about 12 o'clock, a breeze Last hight, about 12 o chock, a breeze of excitement was raised when Fred Lamont, the jeweler employed at the establishment of Geo. Hartley, the watchmaker, rushed to officers Hill and Strong with the announcement that the store had been entered and eighteen silver watches stolen. The officers started for the store and a crowd followed the officers, who, however, excluded all persons, with the exception of The Disparch reporter, and a Salt Texas, headquarters at San Antonio, bound R. G. W. train, and made a thorough search for any suspicious character. The officers worked hard until three o'clock this morning, making one arrest on suspicion.

In the meantime Lamont, who had nearly gone crazy, got word to Hartley, his employe, who hastened down town and coolly informed Lamont that the whole thing was a joke, that he and his wife had come down and taken the watches, "just for a bit of a lark, you

The officers were notified of the fact, n order to stop them from making any further arrest, but they were wild when they found that they had been victimized, and expressed themselves strongly against Hartley and his jokes. It would serve this wily joker just right if the police called on him to pay the expense the officers were put to, and would probably serve him as a lesson against such practical jokes.

One more break like dred miners in Peoria district joined the strike to-day. There are eight rail- road mines in this district, and the rest are owned by private corporations. All operators have plenty of coal on hand. The strike would not affect them for sixty days. They have been auticipating trouble since spring, and all dealers to day. The officers were notified of the fact, as a lesson against such practical jokes in the future. One more break like that and he will probably find himself "in the soup," as it caused a great deal of excitement and lots of work

Charles Snyder and D. L. Van Wickle were before Justice Noon yesterday morning on a complaint sworn out by a man named Pollard. D. D. Houtz appeared for the prosecution and Dudley & Woods for the defense. The complaint charged the defendants with being solicitors for backs and omni-EMPEROR. busses, and that they ere farther from the bus than the ordinance allowed. The prosecution endeavored to prove that the defendants were porters, but the testimony was away from the complaint entirely. After the testimony was all given the attorneys argued the case and court took a recess until 2 o'clock. Upon re-assembling Judge Noon returned the following: "I find that there is no evidence to system the complaint and further. to sustain the complaint, and further, that the complaint charges one thing, while the testimony for the prosecu-tion goes to prove another. Therefore, I order that the defendants be dis-charged." The boys accordingly went on their way rejoicing, and "set 'em up" to a few friends. The complaint was evidently there sult of jealousy, and not for the purpose of securing the keeping of our laws.

When he gets to New York the custom house officer steps up and says: "Hold on there what are you doing wit, these goods?" The furmer replies: "I am coing home with them, I have just sold my wheat in England and I have bought a lot of goods very cheap and I am taking them to Michigan where I live." "How much did you pay for those g ods," much did you pay for those g ods," says the custom house officer "1100," says the farmer. "Give me $46," desays the farmer. "Give me $46," demands the agent of the government. "Forty-six dellars! What on earth do you want $46 for?" says the farmer. "That is the tex," says the custom house officer "that is levied by the government." "Oh!" says the farmer, "that is all right, I am a square man, I am perfectly willing to help support the government. I live in the United States and never grumble at paying my share of the burdens of the nation." share of the burdens of the nation. "it is not because the government needs any money," says the custom house officer, "the government don't need it at all; we are now receiving $125,000,000 a year more than we can use; it is not for the support of the government that we want this, but we want you to buy everything you need in this country, and this $46 is a fine which the law imposes on you because you have committed the crime of buying your goods where you could buy them the cheapest." "Gracious me!" cried the farmer, "is that it?
Why, I raise more wheat than I can sell here and I am obliged to take my surplus to England, and I find I can save a good deal of money by purchasing some of my goods over there; wheat is awful low and I have to figure pretty close to make both ends meet; you ought to make this country take to my wheat, then I would not have any objection to buying everything I need here also; it is unfair to impose a fine on me when is unfair to impose a nine on me when you make me go 4,000 miles away to sell my grop. I cannot stand it." "Well, you will have to stand it." says the officer, "for it is the law," "I de-"Well, you will have to stand it," save the officer, "for it is the law." "I de-clare," replies the farmer, "this thing amounts to a regular confiscation of my property." But he pays it. What is the result? The farmer has lost 70 bushels of wheat. It was just the same as if a band of thieves had gone to his barn in the night and stolen 70 bush-els of wheat.

LOW DOWN DODGING.

If the present political battle in Utab s to be fought upon honest grounds, then let it be understood, and for heavin's sake let us not resort to tactics that only belong to the deba ed. Our reason for making this remark is because the Republican organ in this city was dishonest enough on Monday evening to mutilate an article published in THE DISPATCH Sunday morning that robs it of the very intent, for which it was published. That our readers may at a glance see what we refer to, we
